

CONTENT & POSTING

Beat the Posting Block

You can make the content. You freeze on publish. Here's the system - and the prompts - that get it live anyway.

The block is insecurity, not ability. Engineer around it.

- 1 Pre-decide what + where before you create - no blank decision at publish.
- 2 Write the caption in advance so only one action is left.
- 3 Shrink it to: 'paste this, hit publish.'
- 4 Separate creating from posting - post in a tiny scheduled moment.
- 5 Drafted is not done. Published is done. Name the win out loud.

That's the whole system. The rest of this guide walks each step, with copy-paste prompts you can run in one tap.

The deep walkthrough

1

Name the avoidance

You can't fix what you won't name. This is fear, not laziness.

PROMPT · NAME WHAT'S STOPPING ME

I keep making content but not posting it. Ask me 3 short questions to find what I'm actually afraid of when I hit publish, then reflect it back in one honest sentence and one reframe.

2

Pre-decide everything

Remove every decision from publish-time.

PROMPT · PRE-DECIDE THE POST

For this content: [DESCRIBE], decide FOR me: which ONE platform, the exact caption, and the single posting action. Don't give me options - make the call so all I do is paste and publish.

3

Shrink and ship

Make the action too small to avoid.

PROMPT · WALK ME THROUGH POSTING

Walk me through posting this RIGHT NOW, one tiny step at a time - open the app, paste, hit publish. One instruction per message. Wait for me to say 'done' before the next. Celebrate when it's live.

REDEFINE DONE

A post that never goes live did nothing. Published is the only finish line - and it deserves a celebration every time.
